Cross-Border Collaborations in Private Land Conservation: Lessons Learned and the Path Forward

October 27, 2016
Minneapolis Central Library
Minneapolis, Minnesota, USA

The International Land Conservation Network (ILCN) will be at the Land Trust Alliance's Rally in Minneapolis, Minnesota this October, 2016. The day before Rally begins, the ILCN will host a daylong session focused on cross-border collaboration for private land conservation.

Goals for the workshop

Featuring case studies from Mexico, Canada, the European Union, the United States and others, participants will explore successful models of cross-border conservation collaboration, planning, and fundraising. Presenters will share lessons learned and discuss how their successes may be replicated in other localities.

This gathering will build on the success of the ILCN's First Congress in Berlin, Germany in October 2015, which catalyzed three primary activities:

- Helping to frame constructive policy dialogues relating to private land conservation.
- Facilitating international exchanges and initiatives, and sharing best practices.
- Catalyzing the growth and connectedness of the Network, and raising awareness about privately protected land.

In addition to presentations, this workshop will include time to network with other international participants and to discuss how the ILCN may best serve this community, as we seek to strengthen the international community of practice through the activities outlined above.

Workshop Logistics

The ILCN workshop will be an all day meeting on Thursday, October 27 at the Minneapolis Central Library. There is no registration charge or attendance fee for the meeting itself; however, you will be responsible for your own travel and lodging costs, and any subsistence or incidental costs that you may incur.
